DEPT OF SOCIAL SERVICES

William E. Haley received his Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst, and completed postdoctoral work in Geriatric Clinical Psychology at the University of Washington-Seattle. Dr. Haley has over 150 publications in the area of aging, focused primarily on helping family caregivers cope with chronic conditions including Alzheimer's disease, cancer, arthritis, stroke, and terminal illness. He has a special interest in research that develops and evaluates psychosocial interventions for family caregivers.

Dr. Haley is Past Chair of the Behavioral and Social Sciences Section of the Gerontological Society of America, and a Past President of the Section on Clinical Geropsychology of the American Psychological Association. He serves on the Editorial Boards of four leading journals in the field of gerontology, and on a Scientific Review Panel of the National Institute of Mental Health.

Dr. Haley is currently Professor in the School of Aging Studies at the University of South Florida and has additional appointments at the Florida Alzheimer's Disease Center, H. Lee Moffitt Cancer Center, and the Center for Hospice, Palliative Care, and End of Life Studies at USF.

Interventions for Family Caregivers: Do They Make a Difference?

With the aging of our population, increasing numbers of family members are taking on roles as family caregivers. Caregiving can be highly stressful, and many caregivers experience negative mental and physical health consequences from caregiving stress. This presentation will review recent research on the outcomes of psychosocial interventions for caregivers. Evidence that demonstrates the value of structured psychosocial interventions for family caregivers in improving both short term caregiver outcomes, and long term outcomes such as delaying nursing home placement, will be reviewed. Challenges in meeting the needs of culturally diverse caregivers and caregivers for individuals with varying types of impairment will be discussed.
