Subject: Heath insurance requested rate hikes

I am on Connecticare and object to the outrageous increase it, and others, are asking the state regulators to approve.

It would be an unbearable burden for many, and for still others it would be a stressful pressure to bear, having to choose between insurance, meds, food, etc.

How about asking the highly paid insurance executives to voluntarily accept a pay cut, and I mean a substantial cut.

Why should they be exempt from making sacrifices? Why should they live high on the hog while the ordinary people must contend with daily financial pressures?

These executives must see themselves as part of the human race, not as some kind of oversees of another species. We are all human and must work and sacrifice to serve the common need.
