To Zoning Board

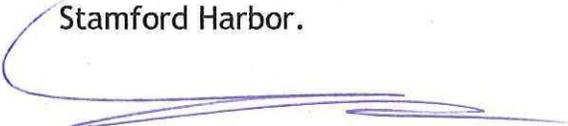

To the editor:

It is great to hear that the South End boatyard issue can actually move forward now that the mayor has signed the letter of intent for the Magee Avenue proposed site (news story, Jan. 8). He has put all options on the table for a public discussion on what is the best solution for Stamford. This strong leadership is what Stamford needs and the boating community and the South End have wanted for so long. This will hopefully push us closer to a solution since there has been an application pending before the Zoning Board for months now!

I appreciate that Mayor Pavia has said that there is a way for everyone to be satisfied and for the necessary services to be provided. I also appreciate that he has not taken a dictatorial approach or side-stepped the public or pertinent boards for comment and/or review.

Whether or not the Magee Avenue proposal is the best way for the city to go, I am looking forward to seeing the plans and have an open mind. I encourage all who are interested to be part of the solution. Just saying no without all the facts is never helpful and will only push a new boatyard further away.

A new boatyard that serves all the needs of boaters being open as soon as possible is in the best interests of the city of Stamford and all who use Stamford Harbor.
