Improperly Pasteurized Milk
Midland Farms, Menands, New York

New York State Agriculture and Markets Commissioner Patrick Hooker announced that Midland Farms, located in Menands, New York, is voluntarily recalling certain milk products due to the potential of improper pasteurization. Proper pasteurization heats milk in order to effectively eliminate bacteria that can cause illness. Some of the recalled products may have been sold in Connecticut.

The Connecticut Department of Agriculture is conducting inspections of wholesalers and retail markets to determine if they have been notified of the recall by Midland Farms and if the effected product has been removed from the shelves.

More information can be obtained by going to <http://www.fda.gov/Safety/Recalls/default.htm> and <http://www.agmkt.state.ny.us/AD/alertList.asp>.

The recalled milk products (approx. 8500 gallons) were all sold in plastic containers and are marketed under the brand names Midland Farms, Corrado's Market, Jersey Dairy Farms and Trade Fair Premium. They all possess the plant code 36-1661. The products also possess a black ink date code near the top of the container. The products involved in this recall include:
