

Metropolitan Transportation Authority

State of New York

New York City Transit • Long Island Rail Road • Metro-North Railroad • Bridges and Tunnels • Capital Construction • Bus Company

Wednesday, March 12, 2014

For Release

IMMEDIATE

Contact: MTA Press Office
(212) 878-7440

Metro-North Restores All Service to and from Grand Central Terminal Full Schedules on Hudson Line, Harlem and New Haven Lines; Some Delays and Crowding Possible

MTA Metro-North Railroad has restored all service to and from Grand Central Terminal after an explosion and building collapse next to Metro-North's tracks running above Park Avenue. New Haven and Harlem line service was restored earlier in the afternoon, and Hudson Line service was restored as additional tracks reopened.

Metro-North structural engineers have verified the integrity of the Park Avenue elevated structure. And all four tracks have been restored to service after being cleared of debris, inspected for track and third rail integrity and approved for operations by Metro-North and the New York City Fire Department.

Trains will run at reduced speeds through the collapse zone to protect nearby employees and reduce vibrations as rescue and recovery work continues. This will result in some delays and crowding through the rush hour.

###