What is Mutual Aid and Assistance?

Mutual aid and assistance is an agreement between municipalities and utilities to provide help to one another in the event of an emergency.

What is CtWARN?

CtWARN is a Water/Wastewater Agency Response Network (WARN) that allows water and wastewater systems in Connecticut to receive rapid mutual aid and assistance from other systems in CT to restore facilities damaged by natural or man-made incidents. Utilities sign the CtWARN standard agreement, which then allows them to share resources with any other system in CT that has also signed the standard agreement.

Who can Participate?

CtWARN is available to all public and private water and wastewater systems in CT. Participation is voluntary, and is not mandated by any local, state, or federal regulation. Mutual aid programs are endorsed and assisted by State and Federal Agencies.

What role does the Agreement play?

During an emergency, the process and procedures to give and receive mutual aid and assistance are governed by the articles in the CtWARN agreement. The agreement covers issues such as requesting assistance, giving assistance, reimbursement, worker's compensation, insurance, liability, and dispute resolution.

Why would I want to join CtWARN?

- No cost and no obligation
There is no fee to join CtWARN, and assistance is provided on a voluntary basis only. There is no requirement to respond or to provide resources.
- Eligibility for Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) disaster reimbursement for qualified members
In case of a federally declared emergency, FEMA reimbursement for received services is contingent upon a pre-existing, signed mutual aid and assistance agreement for eligible organizations.
- Developed, managed, and run by water and wastewater systems
CtWARN is developed and managed by CT water and wastewater systems, so it is established to benefit you to the highest degree possible in terms of giving and receiving aid.
- Timely access to resources
Some emergency aid is contingent upon a disaster declaration from a local or state official. CtWARN does not require a disaster declaration, which means systems can get needed resources faster.
- Access to database of utilities and resources
CtWARN members have access to a password protected database of other systems within the state, including a contact person's name and information, as well as the resources that the utility can provide.
- Both private and public utilities may participate
In CtWARN, both public and private water and wastewater systems may freely give and receive aid and assistance.

Membership paves the way for interstate mutual aid and assistance

All New England states are implementing WARNs. Eventually, the WARNs will be linked so that member systems may help one another across state lines.

New associate memberships now available

- Your company logo and/or website link will be visible from the CtWARN web site
