EHS Circular Letter # 2006-35

August 28, 2006

To: Directors of Health
Chief Sanitarians

From: Cliff McClellan, RS
Sanitary Engineer 3, Private Well Program

Ray Jarema, P.E.
Section Supervisor, Private Well Program

Subject: Well Pressure Tanks and Related Domestic Appliances

The private well homeowner, besides being concerned with the sanitary condition of their well and quality of the well water, should also be aware of other water related appliances that make their home more hospitable. The units serve them well but they should be aware these comfort-producing appliances need, like everything else, periodic maintenance and servicing.

This article identifies the concerns that the homeowner should be aware of. This equipment, when not properly maintained, can have a negative effect on the water they consume and on the quality of life within in their home.

Any additional questions should be directed to the Private Well Program. Ray Jarema or Cliff McClellan can be reached at (860) 509-7296
