Did you know...

There are automated systems in place that notify people when missing persons reports that meet certain criteria have been filed. They are the:

♦ Amber alert: an emergency message with information about the missing child that is broadcasted through radio and television networks.

♦ Silver alert: an emergency message with information about the missing person over the age of 65, or over 18 with a mental impairment, that is broadcasted through radio and television networks.

If you see suspicious activity or think you may have found a missing person, immediately call 911.

REPORT

to the state police or local law enforcement!

What should you do if you believe someone you know has gone missing?

- Report your suspicions to the police - it is NEVER too soon.
- Make sure to inform the police of any special circumstances—such as whether they are a child or elderly person, or if they are on life-dependent medication.
- Keep a record of everyone with whom you speak regarding the missing person.
- Contact friends or family of the missing person and ask if they know their whereabouts, or common places they may visit.
- Make sure to leave one phone line open for incoming calls while you are making these calls.
- DO NOT clean the missing person’s room.
- It is recommended that you not list your phone number on public posters, as to ensure no hoaxes for the reward money, or any harassment. The number for the police department should be listed instead.

How can you help?

- Help keep your family safe by being familiar with their routines and habits and taking frequent pictures.
- Report any suspicious activity to the proper authorities - the first 24 hours of a missing persons investigation are crucial.
- If you know of someone experiencing a missing persons situation, offer to help post flyers or join one of the search parties.
- NEVER hesitate or delay in reporting—time is of the essence.

Myth:
If a loved one goes missing you have to wait 24 hours to file a report with the local or state police.

Truth:
The law in Connecticut permits the immediate reporting of a missing person, regardless of whether they are an adult or a child.
